Tomorrow, Saturday, is the big day Home Coming Day—and from present indications a record breaking crowd will attend the picnic and celebration on the school grounds. Numerous reports have reached the News office that former residents of Sierra Madre will attend and practically the whole town seems to be preparing to eat its basket dinner in the shade of the sycamores on the play ground.

Basket parties have been formed by a number of groups, and many others are giving picnic dinners to invited guests. Scores of people have told us they were going to bring their baskets and families.

The idea of an old fashioned basket picnic has "taken" and not only the committee, the Chamber of Commerce, but the entire community is working and planning to make it a great success.

Come early and enjoy a good visit with our guests, the home-comers, and your neighbors. Don't wait till the last minute and be late for dinner, and don't forget to bring cups for free coffee or milk.

And when you get there talk, laugh, smile, but especially talk, talk to anybody—everybody. Reflect the true Sierra Madre hospitality. Don't wait for an introduction. Don't wait for another to speak first; just talk; get acquainted; speak to a stranger, and make everybody feel at home.

Bring plenty in your baskets. Bring cups or tin cups. Free coffee, cream, sugar, milk, fruit.

NEW STREET LIGHTS

FOR WEST CENTRAL

The committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to ascertain the attitude of property owners on this principal thoroughfare regarding the extension of the ornamental street light system west to Sierra Madre avenue (city limits) lost no time in getting to work and their report is expected in the near future.

The idea of lighting Central avenue and Baldwin also, has always been contemplated and the present system in the business district was installed according to the city engineer's plans and specifications so that the line could be extended in all directions.

It is anticipated that there will be little or no opposition to carrying out the lighting scheme as ornamental street lights on West Central will not only be of great benefit to the city, but will actually enhance the value of every foot of abutting property so that the expense to the property owners will yield them an actual profit.

The committee in charge of this work is composed of three members, Dean William Carson Shaw, George Norris and W. S. Hull.

P. E. AGENT ON VACATION

G. E. Mesecar, agent for the Pacific Electric, left Monday for a two months vacation, which he will spend with his parents at his boyhood home in Lowell, Michigan. Mrs. Mesecar will visit her parents at Long Beach for the same length of time.

H. E. Foskett of Los Angeles will act as agent here during their absence.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE LOSES ITS PRESIDENT

Faithful Official Forced to Resign on Account of Ill Health—Good Meeting, Large Attendance

The regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last Monday night was well attended and that a lively interest in civic affairs is being taken by the members was manifested by the spirited discussion on various subjects.

The surprise of the evening was when the secretary read the resignation of the president, James N. Hawks who stated his doctor had ordered him to either give up his business or all other outside interests in order to conserve and recuperate his failing health.

The resignation was accepted with expressions of regret and by unanimous vote the secretary was ordered to write Mr. Hawks an expression of the esteem and appreciation of the chamber for his untiring, faithful and efficient service as an officer during the years last past. His successor will be elected at the next regular meeting, the first Monday in November.

The Memorial committee was instructed to proceed to secure a suitable mounting for the Service Men's tablet and erect it on the lawn of the Public Library.

A committee was appointed to canvas the sentiment for ornamental street lights on West Central avenue. The Home Coming Day celebration was discussed at length and plans suggested for its greatest success.

Altogether the meeting was a good one. The members are attending as never before and taking an earnest interest in the affairs of the chamber. The committees are working and reporting promptly and best of all perfect harmony prevails—almost.

UNSIGHTLY POLES REMOVED

The linemen of the Pacific Electric railway came out Monday and pulled out the pole from the sidewalk in front of the News office and also one in front of the Sierra Madre Electric company's store.

They at first intended to erect one pole by the side of the big pepper tree, intending that it should do the service of the two removed, but Mr. Pettitt's arguments against the desecration of this historic spot where civic campaigns are made and torn to pieces, the Japanese question settled and the country saved every day, prevailed, and with sufficient pressure shovels and ropes and poles were erected on the railway property and the trolley wire is held in place with extension arms instead of guy wires.

The News, speaking for the business men as well as for itself, thanks the officials of the railway for their prompt compliance with this reasonable request.

WILL OPEN AGAIN

Under the auspices of the Red Cross, the Woman's Exchange at 41 N. Baldwin will again open their rooms to the public at 11 a. m. on Saturday, Oct. 30.

During the summer various new articles have been made, such as comforters, little jackets and other things too numerous to mention, and these will all be on sale on this date.

There will also be a table for cooked food and anyone who desires to make anything on commission or to donate, please have it at the exchange at 11 o'clock.

Proceeds from the sale are for the benefit of the local relief, and the rooms will be open the last Saturday of every month.

CITY NURSE TO RESIGN

Information comes to the News that City Nurse Miss Kate Brewington will present her resignation to the city trustees at the next meeting.

There will be a feeling of genuine regret throughout the city when this occurs, as she has been untiring and efficient in her work, but at the same time a feeling of pleasure when it is stated that she has contracted for a better job in caring for only one "patient" and he is not sick at all.

ASSOCIATED CHAMBERS MEET

The regular monthly meeting of the associated chambers of commerce of San Gabriel valley was held this month at Pomona and was attended by H. E. Allen, James N. Hawks, Robert Mitchell and J. F. Whiting of this place, last Tuesday night.

Two hundred and fifty members emptied 250 plates, at the banquet, during which the story "good gravy," made a decided hit.

Following the banquet, addresses were made on the conservation of mountain water of Los Angeles county and prohibition of Japanese ownership of land. Both subjects were enthusiastically endorsed.

STREET LIGHT HISTORY

Ornamental Lighting System Financed, Installed and Paid for Within Two Months

Friday, July 30, the News first asked the public for subscriptions to the ornamental light fund. On Monday, Aug. 23, the contract was let to the lowest bidder, Sierra Madre Electric company. On Wednesday, Sept. 22, the work was finished and the following Monday, Sept. 27, the money was paid in full. The contract was for $1890. Additional expense was for installing a temporary transformer by the Southern California Edison company, $22.50; powder for the street (street dance), $6.00 and Sierra Madre band $10.00, a total of $1928.50.

The property owners of the business district paid $1.00 per front foot and every one paid except the Craig property (vacant) north of the pool hall. The tenants paid 50 cents per front foot and every one paid except the city trustees, as tenants of the city hall. The balance was paid by public subscription, except less than $100, which the business men made up to pay the contract in full.

This was strictly a newspaper campaign. The News carried it to the people, after the Board of Trade had been asked to put it through, and without assistance, led the movement which was backed by the public with the above gratifying result.

"Has Poundstone returned your car?" he queried.

"Why, yes, What makes you ask?" "Oh, I had a suspicion he might. You see, I called him up and suggested it; somehow his honor is peculiarly susceptible to suggestions from me, and—"

"Bryce Cardigan," she declared, "you're a sly rascal—that's what you are. I shan't tell you another thing."

"I hope you had a stenographer at the dictograph when the mayor and your uncle cooked up their little deal. That was thoughtful of you, Shirley. It was a bully club to have up your sleeve at the final showdown, for with it you can make Unkiedunk behave himself and force that compromise you spoke of. Seriously, however, I don't want you to use it, Shirley. We must avoid a scandal by all means; and praise be, I don't need your club to beat your uncle's brains out. I'm taking his club away from him to use for that purpose."

"Really, I believe you're happy today."

"Happy? I should tell a man! If the streets of Sequoia were paved with eggs, I could walk them all day without making an omelette."

"It must be nice to feel so happy, after so many months of the blues."

"Indeed it is, Shirley. You see until very recently I was very much worried as to your attitude toward me. I couldn't believe you'd so far forget yourself as to love me in spite of everything—so I never took the trouble to ask you. And now I don't have to ask you. I know! And I'll be around to see you after I get that crossing in!"

"You're perfectly horrid," she blazed, and hung up without the formality of saying good-by.

Shortly after Shirley's departure from his office, Bryce had a visit from Buck Ogilvy. The latter wore a neatly pressed suit of Shepherd plaid, with a white carnation in his lapel, and he was apparently the most light-hearted young man in Humboldt county. He struck an attitude and demanded:

"Boss, what do you think of my new suit?"

"You lunatic! Don't you know red blonds should never wear light shades? You're dressed like a negro minstrel."

"Well, I feel as happy as an end-man. And by the way, you're all chirped up yourself. Who's been helping you to the elixir of life? When we parted last night, you were forty fathoms deep in the slough of despond."

"No less a divinity than Miss Shirley Sumner! She called this morning to explain that last night's fiasco was none of her making, and quite innocently she imparted the information that old Pennington lighted out for San Francisco at one o'clock this morning. Wherefore I laugh. Te-he! Ha-hah!"

"Three long, loud raucous cheers for Uncle. He's gone to rush a restraining order through the United States district court. Wonder why he didn't wire his attorney to attend to the matter for him."

"Three Long, Loud, Raucous Cheers for Uncle."

"He has the crossing blocked, and inasmuch as the mayor feeds out of Pennington's hand, the Colonel is quite confident that said crossing will be again blocked. As for the restraining order—well, if one wants a thing well done, one should do it oneself."

"All that doesn't explain your cheerful attitude, though."

"Oh, but it does. I've told you about old Duncan McTavish, Moira's father, haven't I? Ogilvy nodded, and Bryce continued: "When I fired the old scoundrel for boozing, it almost broke his heart; he had to leave Humboldt, where everybody knew him, so he wandered down into Mendocino county and got a job sticking lumber in the drying yard of the Willis Lumber company. He's been there two months now, and I am informed by his employer that old Mac hasn't taken a drink in all that time. And what's more, he isn't going to take one again."

"How do you know?"

"Because I make it my business to find out. Mac was the finest woods-boss this county ever knew; hence you do not assume that I would lose the old scoundrel without making a fight for him, do you? Why, Buck, he's been on the Cardigan pay roll thirty years, and I only fired him in order to reform him. Well, last week I sent one of Mac's old friends down to Willis purposely to call on him and invite him out 'for a time'; but Mac wouldn't drink with him. No, sir, he couldn't be tempted. On the contrary, he told the tempter that I had promised to give him back his job if he remained on the water wagon for one year; he was resolved to win back his job and his self-respect."

"I know what your plan is," Ogilvy interrupted. "Listen, now, to father's words of wisdom. Didn't you hear me tell that girl and her villainous avuncular relative last night that I had another ace up my kimono?" Bryce nodded.

"That was not brag, old dear. I had the ace, and this morning I played it—wherefore in my heart there is that peace that passeth understanding—particularly since I have just had a telegram informing me that my ace took the odd trick."

"You will recall that from the very instant we decided to cut in that jump-crossing, we commenced to plan against interference by Pennington; in consequence we kept, or tried to keep, our decision a secret. However, there existed at all times the possibility that Pennington might discover our benevolent intentions and block us with his only weapon—a restraining order issued by the judge of the United States district court."

"Now, one of the most delightful things I know about a court is that it is open to all men seeking justice—or injustice disguised as justice. Also there is a wise old saw to the effect that battles are won by the fellow who gets there first with the most men. The situation from the start was absurdly simple. If Pennington got to the district court first, we were lost!"

"You mean you got there first?" exclaimed Bryce.

"I did—by the very simple method of preparing to get there first in case anything slipped. Something did slip—last night! However, I was ready; so all I had to do was press the button, for as Omar Khayyam remarked: 'What shall it avail a man if he buyeth a padlock for his stable after his favorite stallion hath been lifted?' Several days ago, my boy, I wrote a long letter to our attorney in San Francisco explaining every detail of our predicament; the instant I received that temporary franchise from the city council, I mailed a certified copy of it to our attorney also. Then, in anticipation of our discovery by Pennington, I instructed the attorney to prepare the complaint and petition for a restraining order against Seth Pennington et al, and stand by to rush to the judge with it the instant he heard from me!"

"Well, about the time old Pennington started for San Francisco this morning, I had our attorney out of bed and on the long-distance telephone; at nine o'clock this morning he appeared in the United States district court; at nine-fifteen the judge signed a restraining order forbidding our enemies to interfere with us in the exercise of a right legally granted us by the city of Sequoia, and at nine-thirty a deputy United States marshal started in an automobile for Sequoia, via the overland route. He will arrive late tomorrow night, and on Sunday we will get that locomotive out of our way and install our crossing."

"And Pennington—"

"Ah, the poor Pennington! Mon pauvre Seth!" Buck sighed comically. "He will be just twenty-four hours late."

"You old he-fox!" Bryce murmured. "You wicked, wicked man!"

Buck Ogilvy lifted his lapel and sniffed luxuriously at his white carnation, the while a thin little smile played around the corners of his humorous mouth. "Ah," he murmured presently, "life's pretty sweet, isn't it?"

CHAPTER XVII.

Events followed each other with refreshing rapidity. While the crew of the big locomotive on the crossing busied themselves getting up steam, Sexton and Jules Rondeau toiled at the loading of the discarded boiler and heavy castings aboard two flat cars. By utilizing the steel derrick on the company's wrecking car, this task was completed by noon, and after luncheon the mogul backed up the main line past the switch into the Laguna Grande yards; whereupon the switch engine kicked the two flat cars and the wrecking car out of the yard and down to the crossing, where the obstructions were promptly unloaded. The police watched the operation with alert interest but forebore to interfere in this high-handed closing of a public thoroughfare.

To Sexton's annoyance and secret apprehension, Bryce Cardigan and Buck Ogilvy promptly appeared on the scene, both very cheerful and lavish with expert advice as to the best method of expediting the job in hand. To Bryce's surprise Jules Rondeau appeared to take secret enjoyment of this good-natured chaffing of the Laguna Grande manager. Occasionally he eyed Bryce curiously but without animus, and presently he flashed the latter a lightning wink, as if to say: "What a fool Sexton is to oppose you!"

"Well, Rondeau," Bryce hailed the woods-boss cheerfully, "I see you have quite recovered from that working over I gave you some time ago. No hard feelings, I trust. I shouldn't care to have that job to do over again. You're a tough one."

"By gar, she don't pay for have hard feelings wiz you, m'sieur," Rondeau answered bluntly. "We have one fine fight, but"—he shrugged—"I don't want some more." He approached Bryce and lowered his voice. "For one month

"When I Cut Your Beeg Trees, M'sieur, I Feel Like Hell."

"I am no good all ze tam. We don't fight some more, m'sieur. And I have feel ashame' for dose Black Minoreca feller. Always wiz him eet is ze knife or ze club—and now eet is ze rifle. Cochen! When I fight, I fight wiz what le bon Dieu give me."

"You appear to have a certain code, after all," Bryce laughed. "I am inclined to like you for it. You're sporty in your way, you tremendous scoundrel!"

"Mebbeso," Rondeau suggested hopefully, "M'sieur likes me for woods-boss?"

"Why, what's the matter with Pennington? Is he tired of you?"

The color mounted slowly to the woods-boss's swarthy cheek. "Madoiselle Summar, he's tell me pretty soon he's goin' to be boss of Laguna Grande an' stop all thees fight. An' w'en Madoiselle, he is in the saddle, good-bye Jules Rondeau. Thees country—I like him. I feel sad, M'sieur, to leave dose beeg trees." He paused, looking rather wistfully at Bryce. "I am fine woods-boss for somebody," he suggested hopefully.

"You think Miss Sumner dislikes you then, Rondeau?"

"I don't theenk, I know." He sighed; his huge body seemed to droop. "I am out of zee good luck now," he murmured bitterly. "Everybody, she hate Jules Rondeau." Again he sighed. "Dose beeg trees! In Quebec we have none. In zee woods, M'sieur, I feel—here!" And he laid his great calloused, hairy hand over his heart.

"W'en I cut your beeg trees, M'sieur, I feel like hell."

"That infernal gorilla of a man is a poet," Buck Ogilvy declared. "I'd think twice before I let him get out of the country, Bryce."

"Whose salt he eats, his song he sings," quoth Bryce. "I forgive you, Rondeau, and when I need a woods-boss like you, I'll send for you."

At eleven o'clock Saturday night the deputy United States marshal arrived in Sequoia. Upon the advice of Buck Ogilvy, however, he made no attempt at service that night, notwithstanding the fact that Jules Rondeau and his bullies still guarded the crossing. At eight o'clock Sunday morning, however, Bryce Cardigan drove him down to the crossing. Buck Ogilvy was already there with his men, superintending erection of a huge derrick close to the heap of obstructions placed on the crossing. Sexton was watching him uneasily, and flushed as Ogilvy pointed him out to the marshal.

"There's your meat, marshal," he announced. The marshal approached and extended toward Sexton a copy of the restraining order. The latter struck it aside and refused to accept it—whereupon the deputy marshal tapped him on the shoulder with it. "Tag! You're out of the game, my friend," he said pleasantly.

As the document fluttered to Sexton's feet, the latter turned to Jules Rondeau. "I can no longer take charge here, Rondeau," he explained. "I am forbidden to interfere."

"Jules Rondeau can do ze job," the woods-boss replied easily. "Ze law, she have not restrain' me. I guess, mebbeso, you don't take dose theings away, eh, M'sieur Cardigan. Myself, I lak see."

The deputy marshal handed Rondeau a paper, at the same time showing him his badge. "You're out, too, my friend," he laughed. "Don't be foolish to try to buck the law. If you do, I shall have to place a nice little pair of handcuffs on you and throw you in jail—and if you resist arrest, I shall have to shoot you. I have one of these little restraining orders for every able-bodied man in the Laguna Grande Lumber company's employ—thanks to Mr. Ogilvy's foresight; so it is useless to try to beat this game on a technicality."

Sexton, who still lingered, made a gesture of surrender. "Dismiss your crew, Rondeau," he ordered. "We're whipped to a frazzle."

A gleam of pleasure, not unmixed with triumph, lighted the dark eyes of the French-Canadian. "I tol' M'sieur Sexton she cannot fight M'sieur Cardigan and win," he said simply. "Now mebbe he believe that Jules Rondeau know something."

"Shut up," Sexton roared petulantly. Rondeau shrugged contemptuously, turned, and with a sweep of his great arm indicated to his men that they were to go; then, without a backward glance to see that they followed, the woods boss strode away in the direction of the Laguna Grande mill. Arrived at the mill office, he entered, took down the telephone, and called up Shirley Sumner.

"Madoiselle," he said, "Jules Rondeau speaks to you. I have for you zee good news. Bryce Cardigan, she puts in the crossing today. One man of the law she comes from San Francisco with papers, and M'sieur Sexton say to me: 'Rondeau, we are whip. Deesness your men.' So I have deesness dose men, and now I deesmess myself. Mebbeso bimely I go to work for M'sieur Cardigan. For Madoiselle I have no weesh to make trouble to fire me. I queet. I will not fight dose dirty fight some more. Au revoir, madoiselle. I go."

And without further ado he hung up.

"What's this, what's this?" Sexton demanded. "You're going to quit? Nonsense, Rondeau, nonsense!"

"I will have my time, M'sieur," said Jules Rondeau. "I go to work for a man. Mebbeso I am not woods boss for heem, but—I work."

"You'll have to wait until the Colonel returns, Rondeau."

"I will have my time," said Jules Rondeau patiently.

"Then you'll wait till pay day for it, Rondeau. You know our rules. Any man who quits without notice waits until the regular pay day for his money."

Jules advanced until he towered directly over the manager. "I tol' M'sieur I would have my time," he repeated once more. "Is M'sieur deaf in ze ears?" He raised his right hand, much as a bear raises its paw; his blunt fingers worked a little and there was a smoldering fire in his dark eyes.

Without further protest Sexton opened the safe, counted out the wages due, and took Rondeau's receipt.

"Thank you, M'sieur," the woods boss growled as he swept the coin into his pocket. "Now I work for M'sieur Cardigan; so, M'sieur, I will have zee switch engine weeth two flat cars and zee wrecking car. Dose dam trash on zee crossing—M'sieur Cardigan does not like, and by gar, I take heem away. You understand, M'sieur? I am Jules Rondeau, and I work for M'sieur Cardigan. La la, M'sieur!" The great hand closed over Sexton's collar. "Not zee pistol—no, not for Jules Rondeau."

Quite as easily as a woman dresses a baby, he gagged Sexton with Sexton's own handkerchief, laid him gently on the floor and departed, locking the door behind him and taking the key. At the corner of the building, where the telephone line entered the office, he paused, jerked once at the wire, and passed on, leaving the broken ends on the ground.

In the roundhouse he found the switch engine crew on duty, waiting for steam in the boiler. The withdrawal of both locomotives, brief as had been their absence, had caused a glut of logs at the Laguna Grande landings, and Sexton was catching up with the traffic by sending the switch engine crew out for one trainload, even though it was Sunday. The crew had been used to receiving orders from Rondeau, and moreover they were not aware of his recent action; hence at his command they ran the switch engine out of the roundhouse, coupled up the two flat cars and the wrecking car, and backed down to the crossing. Upon arrival, Jules Rondeau leaned out of the cab window and hailed Bryce. "M'sieur," he said, "do not bozzer to make zee derrick. I have here zee wrecking car—all you need; pretty soon we lift him off zee crossing. I tell you, eh, M'sieur Cardigan?"

Bryce stepped over to the switch engine and looked up at his late enemy. "By whose orders is this train here?" he queried.

"Mine," Rondeau quickly answered. "M'sieur Sexton I have tie like one little pig and lock her in her office. I work now for M'sieur."

And he did. He waited not for a confirmation from his new master but proceeded to direct operations like the born driver and leader of men that he was. With his late employer's gear he fastened to the old castings and the boiler, lifted them with the derrick on the wrecking car, and swung them up and around onto the flat cars. By the middle of the afternoon the crossing was once more clear. Then the Cardigan crew fell upon it while Jules Rondeau ran the train back to the Laguna Grande yards, dismissed his crew, returned to the mill office, and released the manager.

"You'll pay through the nose for this, you scoundrel," Sexton whimpered. "I'll fix you, you traitor!"

"You feex nothing, M'sieur Sexton," Rondeau replied imperturbably. "Who is witness Jules Rondeau tie you up? Somebody see you, no? I guess you don't feex me. Sacre! I guess you don't feex."

CHAPTER XVIII.

Colonel Pennington's discovery at San Francisco that Bryce Cardigan had stolen his thunder and turned the bolt upon him, was the hardest blow Seth Pennington could remember having received throughout his thirty-odd years of give and take. He was too old and experienced a campaigner, however, to permit a futile rage to cloud his reason; he prided himself upon being a foeman worthy of any man's steel.

On Tuesday he returned to Sequoia. Sexton related to him in detail the events which had transpired since his departure, but elicited nothing more than a noncommittal grunt.

"There is one more matter, sir, which will doubtless be of interest to you," Sexton continued apologetically. "Miss Sumner called me on the telephone yesterday and instructed me formally to notify the board of directors of the Laguna Grande company of a special meeting of the board, to be held here at two o'clock this afternoon. In view of the impossibility of communicating with you while you were en route, I conformed to her wishes. Our by-laws, as you know, stipulate that no meeting of the board shall be called without formal written notice to each director mailed twenty-four hours previously."

"What the devil do you mean, Sexton, by conforming to her wishes? Miss Sumner is not a director of this company," Pennington's voice was harsh and trembled apprehensively.

"Miss Sumner controls forty per cent of the Laguna Grande stock, sir. I took that into consideration."

"You lie!" Pennington all but screamed. "You took into consideration your job as secretary and general manager. Damnation!"

He rose and commenced pacing up and down his office. Suddenly he paused. Sexton still stood beside his desk, watching him respectfully. "You fool!" he snarled. "Get out of here and leave me alone."

Sexton departed promptly, glancing at his watch as he did so. It lacked five minutes of two. He passed Shirley Sumner in the general office.

"Shirley," Pennington began in a hoarse voice as she entered his office, "what is the meaning of this directors' meeting you have requested?"

"Be seated, Uncle Seth," the girl answered quietly. "If you will only be quiet and reasonable, perhaps we can dispense with this directors' meeting which appears to frighten you so."

He sat down promptly, a look of relief on his face.

"I scarcely know how to begin, Uncle Seth," Shirley commenced sadly. "It hurts me terribly to be forced to hurt you, but there doesn't appear to be any other way out of it. I cannot trust you to manage my financial affairs in the future—this for a number of reasons, the principal one being—"

"Young Cardigan," he interrupted in a low voice.

Charles V Had Faith in Women. The famous emperor Charles V, who was accounted one of the ablest rulers of his time, had such confidence in the ability of women to govern that he appointed three successively as regents of the Netherlands.

MANY FORMS OF EARLY FLAGS

Various Types Were Used Before the Present Form of Old Glory was Adopted.

According to the Smithsonian Institution there were many forms of early flags, especially colonial types, used by the individual colonies and militia regiments, before the flag of the United States was established by the continental congress June 14, 1777, the anniversary of which date is now celebrated as flag day. This act required that the flag of the United States be of 13 horizontal stripes, alternate red and white, and that the union be 13 white stars on a blue field, representing a new constellation.

One of the first occasions for public display of the Stars and Stripes is said to have been August 6, 1777, when the new flag was hoisted over the troops at Fort Schuyler, Rome, N. Y. John Paul Jones is said to have been the first to fly the Stars and Stripes over the high seas on the Ranger in November, 1777.

From the time of the Revolution the Stars and Stripes in the flag have varied. There were 13 stars during the Revolution, 15 in the war of 1812, 29 in the Mexican war, 33 to 35 in the Civil war, 45 in the Spanish war and 48 today. The stripes were changed first from 13 to 15 and then back again to 13. Our national flag is among the oldest flags of the nations, being older than the present British Jack, the French tricolor and the flag of Spain.

GLORIOUS IMAGE OF BUDDHA

Idol in the "Lama City" is Worshipped by Devotees With Almost Insane Devotion.

An 80-foot wooden image of Buddha standing on a golden lotus flower within a sacred temple in "The Lama City," reserved for residences of Mongolian priests, is worshipped with all the insane devotion possible by the Mongolians. The great figure is heavily gilded, incrustated with precious stones, and draped with silken cloths. When the temple is opened to the faithful of the city of Urga a priest at the entrance gives each person a few drops of holy water from a filthy jug, and the people, silent with awe, bathe their faces with the fluid and prostrate themselves before the statue, whose head is lost in the shadows of the temple roof. They kiss its silken draperies, soiled by the lips of thousands, and each one gathers a handful of sacred dirt from the temple floor.

From niches in the wall hundreds of tiny Buddhas gaze impassively on the worshipping Mongols. The scene of worship is described by Roy Chapman Andrews in Harper's Magazine as one "intoxicating in its barbaric splendor." The chorus of prayers which rise and fall in a meaningless half wild chant are broken by the clash of cymbals and the boom of snakeskin drums, and one is fully able to understand the religious fanaticism of the East when the people are seen at prayer in one of these temples.

The Painter's Dog.

Mrs. Ritchie, the daughter of William Makepeace Thackeray, the English novelist, writes of visits when she was a child to Sir Edwin Landseer, the animal painter. She says Sir Edwin was a delightful company and that he told the children many stories of animals as he stood painting at his huge canvases. "I remember," she says, "his telling us an anecdote of one of his dogs. He was in the habit of taking him out every day when his work was over. The dog used to wait patiently all day long while Sir Edwin was painting, but he used to come and lie down at his feet and look up in his face toward five o'clock, and on one occasion finding that no notice was taken of his hints he trotted into the hall and came back with the painter's hat, which he laid at his feet."

Anti-Kissing Law.

In Bavaria, the state railways forbid kissing either on stations, where friends, relatives and families are united, or on trains, while France issued an order two years ago forbidding kissing on trains.

Vanishing Languages.

Nowhere in America has there been such a diversity of Indian languages as in California. But these languages are now rapidly disappearing. Several of them are known only by five or six and others by only twenty or thirty living persons, and hardly a year passes without some dialect, or even language, ceasing to exist through the death of the last individual able to speak it. Efforts are being made to record all these languages for the sake of the light they throw on the ancient history of the Pacific coast.

FRIENDSHIP

If one within a cherished place
Felt safely home to stay
And some usurper claimed the space
By offering better pay;
No need to feel of hope bereft,
Dependent, moan and sigh,
Most every one sometimes gets left
Yet see no cause to die.
The treasured nook most dearly prized,
From which one grieves to part,
Remembrance never advertised,
Kept in a true friend's heart.
—A. L. Soran.

LOCATION OF POLLS AND ELECTION OFFICERS

Following is a list of polling places and names of election boards for the general election Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1920:

Precinct 1—Kindergarten school building; Mildred Taylor, inspector; Virginia L. Roess, judge; Minnie B.
Davis, judge; Mrs. W. E. Walker, clerk; Lillian M. Young, clerk; Marie
T. Watson, clerk.

Precinct 2—Garage, W. Central and Windsor Lane; T. P. Cook, inspector; Bessie Rhodes, judge; E. C. Foster, judge; Mattie Seeley, clerk; Minnie E. Kimball, clerk; Anna B. Brandt, clerk.

Precinct 3—152 N. Mountain Trail
—J. H. Wright, inspector; Annie M.
Greene, judge; Genevieve Neutzel, judge; Edw. H. Wood, clerk; Julia B.
Shannon, clerk; Wm. R. Lees, clerk.

Polls open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m.
The total number of voters registered in the City of Sierra Madre at the primary election in August was 894, divided as follows:

Precinct No. 1, 235; Precinct No. 2, 219; Precinct No. 3, 344. Since the August primary Deputy Register Dietz has registered 102 additional voters, who will be placed in the different precincts to which they belong.
This gives the city a voting strength of approximately 900 votes. Less than 40 per cent of the vote was cast at the primaries. It is estimated that from 60 to 65 per cent of the registered voters will exercise the right of franchise on Tuesday, Nov. 2. Every person registered should vote on this day. It is a duty one should not neglect.

Let us place Sierra Madre among the banner cities by having the highest vote cast, proportionately, for a city of its size. Every registered voter should vote on all issues, both for candidates for the different offices to be filled and on the constitutional amendments.

Sign the roster at the polling place
the same as you signed your registration blank. Take your ballot, study carefully and use rubber stamp to stamp cross in square opposite name or amendment, but do not use pencil or pen to make the cross—it spoils your ballot and will not be counted.
Fold the ballot as the election officer instructs and when it is dropped into the ballot box your civic duty is fulfilled.

Election officers are there to give you full instructions, but not to campaign for any candidate or measure to be voted.

The program includes a spectacular pageant by which 400 actors will

Fort McArthur in a thrilling sham battle. The fort will reply to the fire and extensive naval maneuvers will be carried out under the command of ranking officers.

On land a stirring military and naval review will be held. It is planned to have Senator James D. Phelan and Lieut. Gen. Hunter Liggett, commanding the Ninth Army Corps, in attendance.

A LOT OF NOISE— DON'T GET NERVOUS

When you hear the five bombs explode tomorrow morning, don't get nervous and think the battleships in the harbor are bombarding the town, but grab your lunch basket and hurry to the picnic grounds at the school house. The five shots is our modern dinner bell.

DEAN SHAW'S SUNDAY SUBJECT

Dean Shaw will preach at the morning service, "Why and How Are Bishops Made?" Dr. Stephens will be consecrated on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock, St. Paul's Cathedral. At the evening service the subject will be, "Does Europe Hate America; If so, Why?" (Copy received too late to classify in Church column.)

COULDN'T STAY AWAY

R. H. Burkett of Springfield, Ohio, was a visitor here last winter and liked the place so well that he bought the Olsen property at Lima and Montecito as an investment, but the "spirit of Sierra Madre" got him and after returning to his eastern home a family consultation resulted in a decision to make this place their permanent home. He returned with his family Wednesday and is now a contented citizen of the best town on earth.

WANTS TO START PICTURE SHOW HERE

The Woman's club at the last meeting, gave the Chamber of Commerce 60 days in which to secure a picture show for Sierra Madre, or they would do it.

In a frantic endeavor by advertising, personal letters and trips to neighboring cities the secretary uncovered three prospects, the most promising of which is Mr. C. E. Hess of Bakersfield.

Mr. Hess, who is a man of means, looked over the ground and the town the first of the week and is anxious to move his family here. He is considering the purchase of one of several locations and erecting a suitable building for a first class picture show.

MEETING OF O. E. S.

A regular meeting of the Eastern Star was held last Monday evening in the Masonic hall. About forty-five members and visitors were present, among whom were the matron and patron and other officers and members of La Puente Chapter, Mr. and Mrs. Church of El Monte Chapter, and Mr. and Mrs. Chambers of Montgomery, Alabama.

A new petition was received into the order and four applicants balloted for. Following, the initiatory ceremony was performed upon seven new candidates as follows: Mrs. J. E. pleby, Mrs. W. S. Andrews, Mrs. Howard, Frank Spencer, Raymond Andrews, C. S. Vannier, and James Sadlier. The hall was very artistically decorated by the committee on decoration.

At the close of the ceremony all were invited into the club dining room where tables were set, the decoration scheme also being carried out very effectively. The committee on refreshments served delicious coffee, and cream, sandwiches, pickles and home made doughnuts, which were not only a credit to themselves but a treat to all who shared it.

A number of guests were called upon for remarks and responded with very appropriate and uplifting words regarding the order and of the hospitality shown them.

A half hour of dancing followed, after which all departed for home feeling that a most pleasant evening had been spent.

OH, THAT STREET DANCE

At 8 o'clock last Saturday night the new ornamental street lights were dedicated to the city to the accompaniment of deafening bombs, exploding high in the air, the crash of band music and the squawking of automobile horns and sirens.

After the noise had subsided, the following document was read and presented to the mayor:

Mr. Mayor: On behalf of the citizens of Sierra Madre, whose names are hereto attached, and who have paid for, by voluntary subscription, the ornamental street lighting system extending from Central street and Victoria Lane east along Central street, Kersting Court and North Baldwin, and from the southeast corner of Central and Baldwin avenues north to number 48, consisting in all of twelve lights, I, as chairman of the "street light committee" hereby present to you for the City of Sierra Madre said ornamental street lighting system as a free gift, free from all debt or encumbrance, and it is my hope and belief that this progressive step is only the beginning of greater things to come.

J. F. WHITING, Chairman.

Mayor Robert Mitchell replied as follows:

"On behalf of the City of Sierra Madre it gives me a great deal of pleasure to accept this splendid gift and I congratulate you and your committee upon the success of your efforts to make our town a better place in which to live. Let the good work go on until we have the best lights along the foothills."

Then the Sierra Madre band played a spirited one-step and the much talked of street dance was on, and continued until 10 o'clock. Everybody seemed happy and most everybody danced, from a flock of scampering children to several great grand parents.

Miss Hermina Skvarla and Mr. Curtis Goodenow were awarded first prize for the best dancing couple, and the prize for the best dancers in the oldest couple contest went to Mrs. W.
W. Collins and Mr. Louis Dietz, but they had to work for it, as three other couples were close contenders. Mr.
and Mrs. M. D. Welscher gave a correct imitation of championship class, and he still claims that Mr. Dietz won on his record as a city official. Mrs.
A. Wharton Gibson of Pasadena danced with Mr. E. J. Webster and by her courtly grace camouflaged all of her partner's old-time steps. Mr. Webster, however, has his own ideas as to who should have won the prize—and we agree with him.

The prizes were handsome and valuable and were donated by the Woodson F. Jones store.

Compliments were scattered freely regarding the dancing of the little Misses Hazel Kincaid, Eloise Bailey,
Virginia Yerxa and Violet Gerson.

Mrs. Samuel Gerson loaned the big army searchlight which was mounted on the roof of the First National bank and manipulated by the Sierra Madre Electric company, flooding the street with an artificial sunlight that rivalled the original.

The Sierra Madre band, grouped in the entrance of the News office, which was illuminated with three 100-candle power lights, furnished the music and were vigorously and often applauded. This was their first public appearance this season and they acquitted themselves with credit. We are all proud of our band and intend

Automobiles were parked at each end and the south side of the dancing "floor," filling both streets and extending around the corners. A careful count was made and 119 machines reported—a great many more than was even congregated in Sierra Madre before.

Three persons tried to count the number of people, but only an estimate could be made, and they reported 1500, 1550 and 1800, so we think it safe to say that at least 1500 people were on the street and in machines. Captain Osgood said that during his thirty years residence here he had never seen so large nor so happy a crowd in Sierra Madre.

ROBERT MITCHELL, ATTORNEY AT LAW

Robert Mitchell has been closing up the business of his law office in Los Angeles for some weeks in order to open an office here and we are pleased to "release" the announcement in this issue that the change will be effected next week.

Mayor Mitchell will occupy office

he will meet prospective clients in legal

SPECIAL WINDOW DISPLAYS

The special window displays made by our local business men are artistic and suggestive and would do credit to professional window trimmers and metropolitan stores.

Rudolph Hartman has not only a splendid window, but a splendid idea.
Instead of using his window display space to advertise the drug store, he has displayed the products of the industrial institutions of Sierra Madre
as follows:

Kentia Palm Nursery, largest in the world.
Hawthurst Carburetor Co., manufacturers of carbureting specialties for automobiles.

The House of Hartman, chemical works.
Emil Deutsch, manufacturer of cigars.

V. L. Graham, miller, corn meal and graham flour.
E. Waldo Ward, manufacturer of marmalade.

In one of the windows of Sadler's store is an artistic display of the craftsmanship of Miss Helen Sadler.
Every article was designed and executed by Miss Sadler, who has recently opened an art craft studio in Los Angeles.

Another attractive display is the show room and windows of the Sierra Madre Garage. Potted palms, pampas grass and streamers of crepe

PLAN TO REMEDY IGNITION PARTS

Expert Discusses This Important Section of Motorcar's Nervous System.

EXAMINE ALL CONNECTIONS

Make Sure That All Wires Are Tight and That Insulation Is Not Worn Off at Any Spot, Thus Causing Short Circuit.

The best way to locate any electrical trouble is to begin at one end of the ignition system and make a series of tests in regular order. Begin first with the spark plugs under suspicion, writes W. H. Stewart, Jr., president of the Stewart Automobile school, in an exchange.

Moisture on the exposed part of the porcelain will often cause the engine to misfire, but this trouble on a wet day may be obviated by greasing the porcelain with vaseline. Including defective porcelain, other frequent causes of spark plug trouble may be traced to oil or particles of carbon collecting between the points and sooting of the porcelain; points out of adjustment or burned away. Ordinarily the spark plug should be adjusted to about the thickness of an old worn dime, dependent upon the ignition system, carburetor adjustment and design of the engine.

Look at Distributor Case. When you have eliminated the spark plug, examine all wiring and terminal connections, making sure that all wires are tight and that the insulation isn't worn off at any place, thus causing short circuits. Next open the distributor case and see if there is any dirt or carbon dust. If the trouble is here it can be eliminated by wiping with a clean rag. But if it is yet undiscovered then perhaps the misfiring is caused by the contact points being pitted. These should be cleaned and adjusted very accurately according to instructions of the manufacturer. Also make sure that the tappet spring has not weakened or been broken. Remember that this spring is under a constant strain and it will wear watching.

Cause of Serious Missing.

Moisture or grease on the surface of the distributor housing will sometimes cause very serious current skips across the surface of this foreign matter instead of going through its regular channels. The remedy is to wipe off the surface. The presence of moisture may be explained by the fact that it is drawn in with the air through the radiator or may condense on the surface on a damp day. The grease often collects from the oil spray thrown out by the engine.

The ignition system is a delicate assemblage and it is up to you to keep your eye constantly upon it. Little attentions like these give you a smooth running engine and help you to eliminate expensive repairs.

SPRING LEAVES NEED OILING

Thorough Cleaning and Lubrication of Various Parts Make Car Ride Easier.

In speaking of care of automobiles Mr. E. B. Dale, who is in charge of the automobile course at Colorado agricultural college, says, "People will find that a little care with the springs of their car will make riding easier by many per cent. All it takes is care. Anyone who is getting over every self shook up and turned over every time he takes his car out will find this advice worth while: Remove the springs, take them apart and remove all dirt and rust which is between the spring leaves. Polish the parts of the leaves which rub together. Assemble, using plenty of graphite grease between the leaves. The result is gratifying."

REAR OF AUTOMOBILE FORMS CAMPING BED

Spacious Hinged-Back Swings Down to Form Very Comfortable Open-Air Compartment—Canvas Covers Can Be Attached.

The system of camping by automobile shown in the drawing has many of the advantages to be obtained by using a trailer, without a trailer's disadvantages. Unlike the trailer, it is not found covered with dust after a hard day's travel, yet it is comfortable and roomy.

A light truck body is mounted on the automobile chassis. A spacious hinged-back swings down to form a sleeping porch, which is made secure by chains. Upon the inside surface of this top is built a shallow box; the forward end of it opens out flat, and the top side swings up to form the back end of the sleeping compartment. A canvas cover can be attached, as shown, preferably with automobile curtain fasteners. Bedding is laid out on the hinged floor, extending some little distance into the body of the car. In the morning the bedding is quickly put away in the flat box, and the whole rear compartment is readily folded up into the body under the roof of the car body.—F. F. McClintock, New York, in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

AUTOMOBILE PAINTS

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on lubrication.

Two-thirds of the doctors in the United States own motorcars.

Do not allow the engine to race or to run when the car is standing.

The horn for a motorcar was offered as the first free accessory 15 years ago.

When it is absolutely necessary to run on a flat tire, keep the tire in soft dirt, if possible.

Running the engine while the car is standing causes a daily waste of 67,000 gallons of gasoline.

About the only satisfactory material for packing a gasoline connection is hemp string and soap.

One of the common troubles encountered in the brake assembly is a tendency to clattering.

Rear wheels are particularly liable to looseness, and this condition induces rapid tire destruction.

The timely repair of even the most insignificant tread cut prevents sand blisters, mud boils and blowouts.

The addition of a little pure flake graphite to the lubricating oil is a help to motors that have seen some wear.

Uncle Sam—Scientific Baker

By ROBERT H. MOULTON.

THE United States department of agriculture is charged with the work of promoting agriculture in its broadest sense. Hence the department contains many bureaus. The office of farm management, for instance, has for its main object the improvement of farm practice by introducing better business methods and by applying the principles of science.

Then there are the weather bureau, the bureau of animal industry and plant industry, the forest service, the bureau of soils, entomology, biological survey, crop estimates and so on.

Among these are the bureau of chemistry and the bureau of markets. The former is largely concerned with analytical work and investigation under the food and drugs act and questions of agricultural chemistry of public interest. The bureau of markets has a wide scope. Its work is divided into four branches—investigational, demonstrational, service and regulating. One branch of its investigational work is the securing of basic information of fundamental importance regarding marketing methods and conditions and also regarding the standardization of agricultural products and methods used in their handling.

So many of the activities of the department revolve about the grain that the United States produces and eats. The specific activity with which this article is concerned is "the milling and baking qualities of grain for which standards have been established under the United States grain standards act."

Scientific milling and baking have received the attention of a corps of investigators. An experimental mill and baking laboratory have recently been installed at a cost of $50,000. They are quite up-to-date and by means of them a large amount of accurate information, hitherto unobtainable, has been secured.

The laboratory is really a series of laboratories, each equipped for doing a particular part of the investigational work. The wheat samples obtained for testing purposes first pass through the grading laboratory, where a complete mechanical analysis is made of each sample and a detailed record kept of its condition, physical characteristics, purity and soundness. This feature of the investigation is not the least important, as it is through the observation in this room that these investigations can be definitely connected with practical grain grading and wheat valuation.

After this operation is completed the samples pass into the hands of the miller, who puts them through the cleaning machinery, where they are handled in practically the same manner as in the commercial mill cleaning department. The equipment here consists of two grain separators and scourer. Once cleaned, the sample is ready for tempering.

Every type and condition of wheat grown in the country is met with in the course of the work of this laboratory, and owing to the fact that the treatment required for the different samples varies considerably, depending upon its physical character, the judgment of the miller must be assisted by definite information concerning the sample. In this he has before him the record obtained in the grading laboratory, which includes the very necessary data regarding the moisture content. As comparatively small quantities are used in the milling tests, the addition of moisture and the control of all conditions surrounding this process are relatively simple.

The milling is done on a small non-automatic testing mill consisting of four single stands of six by six inch rolls, three corrugated and one smooth. The mill is so operated that the flow of a five-break nine-reduction roller mill, such as is in commercial use, can be closely imitated.

Every effort is made to standardize the conditions under which the tests are made, in order that the results secured may be comparable in all cases.

One innovation in this connection, which is considered of extreme importance, is apparatus for controlling the humidity of the milling room. This has proved to be a very valuable adjunct, and is a distinctly new feature as applied to work of this character.

After a short period in storage the flour produced in the mill goes to the bakery, where its actual quality is determined by its conversion into bread under standardized conditions.

This bakery is very completely equipped for accurately controlled work. Dough-mixing machines, an electrically heated fermentation cabinet in which the heating is automatically controlled, and an electric baking oven constitute the main equipment used by the baker in producing his numerous miniature batches of bread. Once baked, the expansion of the loaf and the texture, color and flavor of the bread are determined and recorded.

Other tests of technical nature, such as will show gluten, protein and moisture content, are made on the flour, to assist in determining its commercial value and interpreting the results of the baking tests. Much of this work is done in a well-equipped laboratory adjoining the bakery. In addition to this the unsurpassed facilities of the bureau of chemistry are also available in the conduct of investigations that lead into the field of chemical research.

The immediate direction of the work of the laboratory is under the chief of the bureau of markets, and the problems holding first place at the present time relate primarily to the many factors that must be considered in the proper revision and intelligent application of the federal wheat standards; however, the facilities offered by this specialized equipment and corps of workers are also available to other bureaus of the department.

Numerous milling and baking tests are made for the bureau of plant industry to assist in their efforts to develop for the various sections of the country more prolific strains of wheat having superior milling and baking qualities.

Cairo, Ill.—"Sometime ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought

I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and

COLE MEAT COOKERY.

So often a few slices of some choice roast, steak or stew is allowed to waste because the family is tired of it, when a little different way of serving the meat, a new sauce, would make it a most attractive and appetizing dish.

Roulade de Boeuf.—Take a pound of cold roast beef, free it from skin, bone and gristle, and put it through the meat grinder with a third of a pound or less of ham or bacon, lean and fat together. Season highly with salt and pepper, add a teaspoonful of finely minced olives, a few drops of tabasco, a teaspoonful of minced parsley, a little lemon peel and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix all together and add a half cupful of cooked macaroni, cut in one-inch lengths and tossed in butter. Add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, and the whites beaten to a stiff froth. Mix well, roll and cover with a greased paper and bake in a well-greased baking pan in a moderate oven one-half hour. Serve with the following sauces: Add salt and pepper to a pint of tomatoes which have been put through a sieve. Add a teaspoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of vinegar, a teaspoonful of onion juice, or a half clove of garlic minced. Cook until reduced slightly in bulk.

Cannelloni la Royale.—Take a pound of cold roast veal, free it from skin and fat and grind it twice through the meat chopper. Add to it a quarter of a pound of ham also minced. Add salt, pepper, minced parsley, half a teaspoonful of minced shallot, a tablespoonful of lemon rind and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix well, add two well-beaten eggs, shape in a roll, cover with buttered paper and bake a half hour.

Mutton Reheated.—Underdone mutton can be turned into a very nice dish. Cut a sufficient number of slices from a leg of mutton; cut in rounds or squares. Place a tablespoonful of butter in a plate. Add to it a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce and salt to taste. Have ready well-browned toast, place a piece of mutton on each, place in a hot oven and bake ten minutes.

Ideas in Gowns From the Stage

Actresses in Paris Provide Interesting Fashions That Attract Attention.

TAILOR-MADE SUIT POPULAR

Outfit, Although the Most Expensive, Is Quite in the Limelight—Blouse Comes Into Its Own Again.

The wide skirt is dying hard in Paris, owing to the popularity of the house of Jeanne Lanvin, who dresses many chic Parisiennes. The fact that it was Lanvin who launched the hip extended full skirt and that she has persisted in exploiting it is doubtless the reason why certain women continue to accept that style, writes a prominent Paris fashion correspondent.

This fashion is noted especially among the actresses in Paris, some of the most important of whom are dressed by Lanvin. This is partly due to their fidelity to the dressmaker as Orchid organdie dress embroidered in rose made over a black taffeta foundation.

It is quite the custom in Paris for a woman to be dressed by one house exclusively. This gives her a marked individuality and she is looked upon as an exponent of the fashion creations of that particular house. To be seen in costumes from another dressmaker would be almost like a betrayal of confidence.

One of the most popular French actresses playing light comed roles is Jane Renouard. This actress has been wearing Lanvin's clothes for several seasons, and in one of her late

The tailored suit, which is about the most expensive costume in Paris, is again becoming popular. During the war period the women of Paris were deprived of man-tailored street costumes, owing to the fact that all masculine workers in dressmaking shops were mobilized. Now the tailored suit comes back into fashion with all the force and interest of a novelty.

For this reason the blouse, from a standpoint of fashion, is again coming into its own. Considerable interest is manifested in the simple tailored blouse with frilled collar and revers. Some of these new shirt style blouses are high necked, with a collar somewhat in Peter Pan shape, but falling from the top of a straight neckband. This style of collar was launched by Lanvin in connection with a number of her tailored suits and blouses, and neckwear manufacturers have taken it up.

The wide ribbon sash-girdle is still one of the most popular trappings. Practically all the leading dressmaking houses as well as the milliners are roles she wore only the white-skirted hip extended models so characteristic of that house. It must be admitted that dresses of this type are eminently suitable to a coquettish and dashing young woman of slender, graceful build. Renouard looks so admirable in her Lanvin dresses that one cannot doubt that she greatly aids in the continuance of this fashion.

Organdie Over Black Taffeta.
A rose-colored organdie dress, made up over a hip extended foundation of black taffeta, is very beautiful. The organdie is a slip-over-the-head, chemise style, with considerable fullness on the hips. The dress opens in a wide panel down the front to show the black foundation. About the waist is a black taffeta ribbon sash tied in a simple square-looped bow at the back. This ribbon has a border of rose-colored satin, matching exactly the tone of the organdie. Interesting ornamentation, in the form of a flat applique and embroidered roses of precisely the same tone, appears on the front of the skirt. On the black taffeta there is likewise a rose-colored applique which enlivens the rather somber foundation. This dress has the low, round neck and short sleeves. Lanvin is making many of her dresses in this style.

Renouard wore with this dress the thinnest of tete-de-negre stockings and black satin slippers. She also wore long mousquetaire gloves of glace kid, finished with points of leather at the edge of the wrinkled top.

Marie Louise, the well-known milliner, made the adorable hat of black horsehair braid, delicate to the point of transparency, banded and bowed with a wide rose taffeta ribbon bordered with black.

Dignity of Line and Design.

In the same role Renouard wore a black taffeta frock, very simple in design, wide skirted, and with a bodice fitting her slender figure quite snugly. The feature of this frock is a big feather design in white, developed in white ribbon and silk floss embroidery, which stands out like an applique and adds materially to the effect of the dress. There are no sleeves. The décolletage is quite low. Again she wore a Marie Louise hat, this time of black satin trimmed with a skeleton plume of Nattier blue ostrich.

In direct contrast with dresses of this type are the models made by houses such as Redfern and Worth, who keep to dignity of line and conventional designs.

Mme. Daimoff, playing at the Renaissance theater, wore a gorgeous dress of semi-conventional type made by Redfern. It was developed in silver brocade and mauve tulle, the latter forming a voluminous sash drape at one side of the back. She carried with this pale mauve and silver dress a brilliant jade green ostrich fan.

In summer suits the plaited skirt continues popular. Many models are being developed in taffeta and satin. Skirts having plaited panels are often accompanied by jackets with plaited panels and neck frills.

The fashion of catching the plaited skirt in at the bottom by means of a restraining band is one of the features in summer tailor-mades. Beer has an interesting new model of this sort, with a loose box coat and a straight plaited skirt developed in white serge with black trimmings. This house also shows a sport suit of khaki-colored serge, trimmed with stitched plaits, which pass around the bottom of the jacket, the hem of the skirt and the flaring edges of the sleeves. Flatly stitched plaits also form a yoke outline on the body of the jacket.

Tailored Suit.

using this form of trimming, and it has met with great success. In many instances when ordering a simple one-piece dress two sashes are made, one in self-tone and one in contrast. The narrow belt of colored galalith is second in popularity, this form being used for belting coats, jackets and simple serge dresses. The shades most in demand are jade green, red and royal blue.

Frocks of Saten.

This is a season of varied types and many materials. The newest frocks are those made of saten in serviceable prints. A very striking model is made in two tones of red with gracefully cut tunic and wide collar and cuffs of white organdie.

New Sport Satin.

Among the new materials is a brand new fabric of sport satin backed with georgette crepe.

Fabric Hat Is Mode.

Consider the fabric hat. It is the mode of the moment.

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SCOUTS FROM 32 STATES

The analysis of the 301 Boy Scouts of America who were chosen to represent the organization at the international contests of the Boy Scouts of the World in England shows that the scouts in the American delegation come from thirty-two states, the District of Columbia and Hawaii. The largest delegation, forty-nine, came from Colorado, but this was because the business men of Denver sent the famous Denver Boy Scout band, which was trained by Innis, the great bandmaster, and is considered the best boys' band in the United States.

There were fifteen boys from Florida, including the famous Pine Tree patrol of Miami and a few crack scouts from Jacksonville, who made a big hit by bringing a motley assortment of mascots, including an alligator, a land turtle and six snakes, one of them over six feet long, and all very much alive.

There were ten scouts from California, ten from Illinois, twenty-four from New York state, eighteen from New Jersey, thirty from Tennessee, fifteen from Pennsylvania, thirteen from Virginia, five from Texas, twenty-one from Michigan, seventeen from Typical scene at Hoboken just before 301 American boy scout "jamboree" representatives sailed for Europe—Scout Milton Emerson of Ridgefield Park, N. J., bidding farewell to his sister, Violet.

Massachusetts, eight from Kentucky, eight from Iowa, six from Indiana, seven from Oklahoma, etc., the one coming farthest being the lone scout representative from Hawaii, Ezra Crane of Troop No. 10, Honolulu.

Fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers of many of the scouts went to New York, some from as far away as California, to bid them good-by when they sailed on the United States army transport Pocahontas from Hoboken, July 7.

SCOUTS RUN A BIG CITY.

The Lancaster, Pa., boy scouts displayed their efficiency and executive ability in the administration of the city government when they occupied for one day the various municipal offices of the city. Special initiative and management were shown in the regulation of street traffic by the "traffic cops." Mayor Charles M. Sauer was busily engaged, during his brief administration, in the enforcement of the city laws and found plenty of work around the city hall. "Chief of Police" Floyd C. Hinden directed the traffic cops and took general charge of the station, while "Fire Chief" John R. Spera was busy keeping a vigilant eye on the city.

SCOUT'S LASSO SAVES GIRL.

When Nora Christie, fourteen years old, of Summit, N. J., fell into a well in a vacant lot, Lewis Ackerman, fifteen years of age, a boy scout, rescued her with a lasso.

Nora and Vera Bowen took a short cut through the lot, when suddenly Nora plunged through the crust of snow and disappeared.

Vera ran to the Ackerman home. Lewis dropped his scout guard rope down the well and Nora put the loop beneath her arms and was hauled to safety.

SCOUTS AID AGED SOLDIERS.

Santa Barbara, Cal., scouts during the G. A. R. convention assisted the veterans on street cars, automobiles, etc., and conducted them to hotels and private houses to which they were assigned, acting as guides and general helpers. During the parade they kept the line of march clear of automobiles, and carried the parade policing and traffic on their own shoulders while the entire police force shouldered the parade.

MANDARIN DUCKS.

"You must be patient, my little son," said Mother Mandarin Duck to her little duckling.

The other ducklings were not talking. Some had wandered off and some were busy thinking and talking of other things. One little duckling had been asking Mother Mandarin Duck a great many questions. He had asked her almost everything he could think of and that was a great deal.

"Well, Mother Mandarin Duck," he said, "when do you suppose it will be? When do you suppose, Mother Mandarin?"

"My little duckling," said Mother Mandarin, "you will not get your gay and gaudy feathers such as the older members of your family have until you are two years old, that is the custom."

"I couldn't get them any sooner, could I?" asked the little duckling.

"That wouldn't be fair," said Mother Mandarin, "for some of the little Mandarins to get their gay plumage ahead of the others, would it now, my love?"

"That is true," said the duckling, "it wouldn't be fair. But I am so impatient for my beauty."

"Of course you are, quack, quack," said Mother Mandarin. "But you see we must all keep to our ways and our customs. They're old and they're good and if we should change them every one would be so confused. Just think of the fussing and fuming and confusion there would be. They would see a mandarin duck with his gay plumage and they would think he was two years old and if he was not two years old and had them everyone would be terribly mixed up.

"We must follow the mandarin duck ways as they've been for years and years, and the dear old mandarin duck ancestors, or grandmothers and grandfathers and great-grandmothers and great-grandfathers wouldn't have started such customs if they weren't right."

"You see, little duckling, we come from China and Japan. Those are the countries in which the Mandarin ducks live. They have always been called the mandarin ducks too—that is our family name."

"Now the colors of a mandarin duck are very fine. There is a touch of green to the top of the head, there are reddish brown and green colors to be seen in the back and about the body as well as blue and all other colors I fancy. At least I don't know the names of all the colors. But we have most of them!"

"Underneath we care for white, nice and simple and pretty, and white makes a nice contrast in the front of our costumes to the gay coats and hats we wear!"

"And when I speak of the coats and hats we wear I mean the gay feathers on our backs and heads. Now take our neighbors in the zoo—the Australian stubble quail. They're brown and they've speckled feathers."

"They're safe here, for in the country they come from they are often sought after by men with guns. They belong to a small-sized family. But while they're all right in their way how dull they are compared to us!"

"We're so gay and bright with our plumage. Everyone wants to look at us. And my little duckling, you must be patient. For colors such as we have can't come at once. We must be patient when ahead of us there is such glory. If we only were going to have speckled brown coats it would seem absurd to wait for them, but it doesn't seem absurd for us to wait for such beautiful feathers, does it?"

"No," said the little duckling, "for beautiful and glorious plumage is well worth waiting for."

"That is the right idea," said Mother Mandarin, "and it is the same idea as people have who are willing to wait and be patient for success and such things. If they can't get it in a hurry they won't give up at once, but they'd wait until they do get it—they'll wait and work."

"And so will we wait for our plumage. And while we don't have to work we won't get discouraged and behave badly but will wait with the right kind of spirit, eh, my little duckling?"

"You're right, Mother Mandarin," said the little duckling. "The glorious plumage of a mandarin duck is worth waiting for!"

This is evidenced by the fact we have paid six monthly dividends to our shareholders and with all probability will double the amount of dividends within the next six months. This is your chance at FORTUNE.

Over 2,100 Acres in Texas

INVEST YOUR MONEY IN A SAFE COMPANY

Safe because we have three producing wells on the pipe-line, netting us handsome returns each day. Soon we will have another well added to this list. We are not wildcatting—but drilling on proven acreage.

Now Paying 2 per Cent Monthly Dividends

And Have Been for the Last Six Months

Yes, leading the field. That is what the Texas Superior Oil Company is doing. Conservative, farsighted investors are hurrying. Stock is selling very fast in this big Texas giant dividend-paying oil company.

The reasons for this rush is their THREE-PRODUCING OIL WELLS—another well soon to come in and spudding in the fifth well—their 2,100 acres which checker-board the great Texas oil fields—their MONTHLY DIVIDENDS and the management of the company by conservative, square-dealing oil-wise men.

The Texas Superior Oil Company is now drilling just north of the famous KEMP-MUNGER-ALLEN FIELD. Their fourth well should come in within the next ten days. In this same field they have spudded in their fifth well. The Superior's drilling program calls for 96 wells.

Many fortunes have already been made—immense profit returns now going into fattened bank accounts—right this minute from this great oil field. But a short distance away there are gushers. The Gulf Refining Company have production on all sides of us—one 800 barrel well.

Our Holding Checkerboard World's Greatest Oil Fields

Our map shows only a portion of our valuable holdings. It shows our producing wells in Wichita county, the wonder oil field of the world and the largest producing county in the Mid-Continent field. Look at this list of valuable acreage—it covers Texas' most important fields.

Eighty-one acres between Kemp-Munger-Allen and Electra. Two producing wells are on this tract. Also our three rigs, which are working day and night. The production in this field has a much longer life than that of other sections.

1,000 acres in Montgomery county, near Houston. Two of the best known geologists in Texas claim the mother pool of oil will be found on this structure.
